OVERVIEW

We aren't all superstar riders with superstar horses, riding in the super events with super accolades coming our way. But that doesn't stop us from riding the best we can, putting as much time and effort into riding as possible (within our "real life" constraints and scheduling) and loving our horses. For some of us, striving to be a better rider must become a lifelong aspiration that develops only in proportion to the resources we have in our own backyards. This blog is especially for people who spend time with horses because of their passion, attraction and love for the horse. You will find a myriad of articles here – some "how to" posts, some thought-provoking posts and even some playing around posts, celebrating our equine friends in every way.
